Clinical Summary (SOAP Format)

SUBJECTIVE

The patient initiated the contact by explicitly stating, "i am depressed." They subsequently reported experiencing symptoms related to anxiety as a primary co-occurring concern. Later in the interaction, the patient emphasized their current mood state by repeating, "I am so depressed." The patient described their current symptoms as acute and intense, specifically reporting that they were "feeling like in exciting and panic attacks right now." This suggested an active state of heightened agitation or severe anxious distress alongside the panic. The chief concerns articulated were chronic depression and acute anxiety symptoms including panic attacks. The patient sought support due to the overwhelming nature of these combined symptoms.

OBJECTIVE

The patient engaged in the interaction by immediately disclosing significant self-reported affective distress, citing both depression and anxiety as primary concerns. Initial communication was notably brief and fragmented, consisting primarily of single-word or short declarative statements regarding symptom presentation. The patient's thought process was mostly goal-directed in disclosing distress, though one brief tangential comment was observed during the exchange. The stated intensity of the psychological discomfort escalated over the course of the interaction. The final communication reported an acute state of distress, with the patient indicating current feelings of extreme depression and ongoing panic attacks. Some minor linguistic imprecision was noted in the description of acute anxiety symptoms. The overall presentation indicates a state of significant current psychological pain and urgency.

Patient:

hey

Therapist (AI):

Hello. What's on your mind?

Patient:

i am depressed

Therapist (AI):

I'm so sorry you're feeling this way. How can I best support you right now?

Patient:

anxiety

Therapist (AI):

That is a heavy combination to carry. I hear you.

Patient:

hello how are you there

Therapist (AI):

I'm here for you. How are you feeling right now?

Patient:

I am so depressed and I am feeling like in exciting and panic attacks right now

Therapist (AI):

That sounds incredibly intense and painful. Right now, can you try one slow, deep breath with me? I'm here.
